The phenomenon known as “Kagerou-Hime” has returned! Yukina Inuhara has, in one night, been taken away to a dilapidated mansion and has been beaten to death. Kagerou-Hime’s path of destiny has begun. Heading into a dark mansion, along with you, are not just Yukina’s closest friends, but all of the members of the village. Along with the mansion are other residents, inhabitants of the shadows: humans, monsters, you never know... In order to light the path of

Yukina's fate, you must explore the mansion in this turn-based tactical RPG! The entire studio, headed by director Tokai Onosato (associate game designer and artist for titles such as, TOKYO TENGEN PUZZLE ADVENTURES, STAR MISSION & TOKYO TENGEN PUZZLES ADVENTURES), are excited to announce the opening of our official Kickstarter Page at kagerouthime.com. Your support in this new project will give us the means to deliver this game to the public and to extend the enjoyment of everyone. What is Kagerou-Hime? Kagerou-Hime is an original, tactical RPG for the Android platform, in which players must utilize strategy in order to survive within a sprawling maze of houses and dungeons. There are a multitude of options available in the tactical style gameplay of Kagerou-Hime, from the ability to employ a variety of characters, to the ability to freely roam around different stages as a free-roaming monster. Additionally, the game is set in a region that has a very thick atmosphere and a unique theme. The story in the Kagerou-Hime game takes place in a town called "Jusovo". There, there are a number of small-scale houses on the outskirts of the town. On that day, the town's people, working in their daily lives, suddenly found themselves trapped in the town for no reason. They are fighting through their daily lives but there is no way out. All of a sudden, the streets become increasingly darkened, and it becomes difficult to see. The mysterious events surrounding the imprisonment of the town's residents continues to progress, eventually leading to a series of mysteries and good versus evil. The main characters are all residents of Jusovo, and as they learn about the events taking place

What's new in Over The Counter:

: Colombia Over the Counter: Colombia In the main square of Popayán, a large potted banana tree straddles the center of the sidewalk. It's been there since before I was born and might be the city's unofficial mascot. Every day, the potted banana tree shows up at the same time, smiling warmly in the sun as every person nearby reaches to take a selfie. The presence of the potted banana tree in the main plaza of Popayán evokes a warm feeling of safety; a feeling that draws people together. The plaza itself attracts people from around the world, who come to eat, take part in festivals and watch many kinds of cultural shows. People like to take pictures of the tree, but photography of the tree itself requires experience, finesse, and knowledge of the intricacies of light and shutter speeds. However, the potted banana tree offers an opportunity for many naïve tourists to practice the solitary art of photography. Many of these tourists, who don't know better, consume it - the liquid inside the potted tree. This liquid is known as aguardiente in Spanish and colombian translated as "fire water." In Colombia, aguardiente is also called "grovara" because of the woody consistency of its product. The people consuming aguardiente are called colombianos, and the country they come from is Colombia. The waste that is created by

aguardiente consumption plays a large part in extending the image of Colombia to the world. With the pull of south American architecture, town plazas overflowed with the fried cardboard of colombianos, and propaganda painted across the nation's walls. In Colombian markets around the world, one can find entrails of dead kittens as well as the foul remains of aguardiente consumers. Sip on it, people! People also consume a ton of aguardiente in Colombia, and there seems to be no option but to order a stiff drink at the strip mall liquor store. In Colombia, the term "jugarreta," translated as sports bar or juke joint, refers to a formula of aguardiente, Red Bull, and Coca-Cola. Typically, a jugarreta is a place where you sit on bleachers surrounding an arena type stage,
