Possible Duplicate: Hide comment box in questions if there are answers (or answers that have been accepted)? Is there a way to hide/hide comments on answers that are already answered? A: I was looking for this myself. The way I did it is to mark your answer with [summary] at the top. Then, there's a drop down in the top right corner that will let you choose "Hide link" and then "Hide summary". Sorted. A: There is a stack-overflow meta question about this, and I believe the solution proposed is reasonable. Hi, The one that should be hidden is when you answer a question and leave a comment, that will show up on the question and it is useless to the OP of that question,... A: I think this is a pretty good solution. As dba has mentioned, links are the only visual cue that lets the user distinguish between questions that are answered and questions that are not answered. If this is hidden, then the user is reduced to reading the text, which hopefully means that they'll catch the answers before someone else has the chance to answer. Shown, then hidden again, like this f988f36e3a
